

School board votes to ask voters for building funds

Patrons of the Mountain View school district will have a chance to improve their school facilities in March, as the local board of directors voted Monday night to seek a millage increase for the construction of a new high school, middle school, gymnasium and other plant facilities.

The panel members agreed to ask to the voters of the district for an increase of 16 mills in the local rate. With an extension of the current rate of 45 mills, which is one of the lowest in the state, the group felt that the entire building program can be accomplished.

The school board had discussed a millage increase of 27 mills originally to produce about $1,300,000 for the building project. However, they discarded that proposal and opted to extend the district's current millage rate by nine years, and combine that revenue with the 16 mill increase to produce the same amount of funds.

When district voters go to the polls on March 9, they will be deciding whether or not the district will build a new high school and middle school, containing 16 regular classrooms. Also included in the plans are an art room, a science room, a music and band room, a vocational agriculture classroom and shop, a home economics room, a 12,000 square foot gymnasium, a new kitchen and a library and materials center.

Additional spaces that would be added to the current elementary school building would be four kindergarten classrooms and one elementary classroom.

Total floor space for the project would be about 54,100 square feet.

In putting the issue on the ballot, board members said that they have had a good response from the public concerning the matter.

The board indicated that they chose to put the building program before the voters in this type of proposal because of a number of factors.

One of the main reasons influencing their decision to try to build the new buildings at the elementary school campus was that renovation of old buildings at the current middle and high school campus would be expensive, and that even if that was done, the buildings would still be old.

Energy consumption and savings was also pointed out, as the proposed better insulated buildings would save the district money. Also, the location of a cafeteria would save the school money, as they would no longer have to bus children from one campus to the other in order to feed them each day.

Board members indicated that they would begin an informational campaign in which local district patrons will be made aware of the costs of the project as it relates to the taxpayers, the benefits that would be derived from the issue, and other aspects. The panel is expected to recruit the help of local community and service organizations, industrial promotion groups and others in their efforts at promoting the school building issue.

Discussion held School board members discuss funding of new building program with school superintendent Lynn H. Cox, right, and Dr. Shaver, of the state education department, before voting to put the matter on the school election ballot March 9.

Mountain View passes 1982 budget

Mountain View's financial condition will be in "fair shape" for 1982, Mayor Lona Ackerman said in an interview this week.

"We can take care of the basic services and maintain what we have now," Ackerman said. "We may be able to blacktop some more streets and we might not be able to," he added. "It just depends upon where we are financially when we get around to that point. Hopefully we won't have to cut back on our streets repair work."

The mayor's comments came after the city council passed its 1982 budget. He also indicated that the city's revenue sharing money would be important, since that would be used to fund a number of miscellaneous appropriations that have been funded in the past.

The budget passed by the council makes appropriations of $235,004, with its expected revenues listed at $272,490.

The city's general fund has an expected revenue of $118,390. Subtracting $17,758 as a contingency fund leaves $100,632 available for appropriations.

Of that amount, $56,456 is allocated for administration costs, which include salaries, $24,305; fringe, $4,801; insurance and bonds, $1,100; printing and supplies, $1,750; utilities, $4,000; street lights utilities, $15,000; public building maintenance, $1,000; capital improvement, $2,000; sanitation, $500; and dues and fees, $2,000.

Under the police department heading, $14,808 will come from the general account. (Another $37,192 will come from the revenue sharing account for this purpose). These funds will be paid to the county for law enforcement services in the city.

The city fire department is allocated $6,500 for its heading. Broken down, it adds up to $2,000 for capital improvement, $2,500 for operation and maintenance, $1,000 for insurance and $1,000 for miscellaneous.

The city's streets revenues are expected to total $57,430 next year, and with an $8,615 contingency fund, leaves $48,815 available.

Salaries account for $23,701; extra labor, $1,569; materials will come from the revenue sharing budget; operation and maintenance, $9,000; gas, oil and diesel, $10,000; fees to come out of revenue sharing budget, miscellaneous, $4,545.

Miscellaneous appropriations total $22,868 and will be appropriated from the revenue sharing account carryover. They include Stone County Recreation Complex, $6,500; airport commission, $3,000; Chamber of Commerce, $2,400; ambulance subsidy, $2,368; Civil Defense, $800; Fair Association, $300; Folk Festival Committee, $200; Jaycees, $600; American Legion, $50.

Also, legal aid, $500; cemetery, $100; Stone County Disposal, $3,500; NADC, $1,200; library, $850; misc. expense, $500.

Appropriations from the Revenue Sharing budget include materials, $24,247; operation and maintenance, $750; gas, oil and diesel, $500; and police department, $37,192.

MOUNTAIN VIEW, ARKANSAS — THURSDAY, DECEMBER 31, 1981

Mountain View is selected as site for filming of new motion picture

CBJ Productions, of Shreveport, La., has announced plans to make a full-length feature film with "the majority" of the filming to be done in Mountain View.

Carol Williams, of Horse-shoe Bend, who is handling the public relations for the movie company, said the name of the film will be "Wolverton Mountain," and it will be based on the song by the same name.

The song was recorded by Claude King, of Shreveport, who is the only stockholder in CBJ to be named so far. Although most of the stars who will appear in the movie have not been named yet because the script is still being rewritten, Williams said that King will be a co-star in the movie.

"He will play a set of twin brothers," Williams said.

The movie will be filmed in Clinton, Mountain View and Melbourne, she indicated, but most of the shooting will take place in Mountain View. There will be up to 40 speaking parts, and "several hundred" extras lined, most from the Mountain View community, she added.

The tentative starting date for the filming is March 1, Williams said, but she thought that April 1 might be a more realistic date. Filming will continue for 3 or 4 months, she said. The movie has a $10,000,000 production budget.

Several areas were considered for the site of "Wolverton Mountain," she said, but Mountain View was chosen because of its "distinct mountains," its "untouched beauty," and other factors.

The producers of the movie talked with the makers of the recent "The Blue and the Grey" film in northwest Arkansas, and also considered an area near Clinton where the real Wolverton Mountain is located, Williams said.

The mountains around that area are not as distinct as in the Mountain View area, she said, and it was difficult to differentiate between them.

The farms in that area are more developed and the land doesn't look as natural, she said. In addition, there are more power lines and modern houses in that area, which is not the kind of "set" the "Wolverton" producers were looking for.

The producers have looked at several prospective "Wolverton Mountains" in the Mountain View area, and one of these sites will be chosen to serve as the mountain in the film.

In addition, a cave in the Melbourne area has been selected as the site of another scene. Also, a church "in Stone County" has been selected as hopefully the site of the opening scene of the film, but since the producers have not yet asked church officials for permission to use the church, they did not wish to divulge its identity.

The producers are also negotiating with the Ozark Folk Center to try to hire that facility as a headquarters for the company while shooting.

Auditions for parts in the movie, which is the first one to be produced by CBJ, will be scheduled in the future at Clinton, Mountain View and Melbourne, Williams said.

School filing deadline set for Jan. 22

Persons intending to run for school board positions in the four different school districts in Stone County have until Friday, January 22 to file in order to get their names on the March 9 ballots.

No one has filed as yet for the seven school board positions that will be up for election at that time, according to school records. Six of those positions will be open on the respective school boards, with Timbo, Rural Special, Fifty Six and Mountain View each having at least one opening.

One position will be available on the Stone County School Board.

At Mountain View, one position will be open. That post (position one) had been held by William Parsons, who resigned a number of months ago. The position is now held by Bill Allred, who was appointed to serve by the remaining members of the board. The position at Mountain View will be for a five-year term.

In the Timbo district, position one, currently held by Hugh Trammell, will be up for election. It is also a five-year term.

Fifty Six and Rural Special will elect two board members in the March 9 school election. At Fifty Six, a five-year term position one is up for election. That post was vacated when Shirley Shipman resigned, and it has not been filled.

The other position at Fifty Six (position 5) will be for a four-year term. That position had been held briefly by Rex White, who had been appointed. (Cont. to page 5)

Local man lands part in Arkansas-made TV movie

By Wally Wellman

If you're watching a Civil War movie on television sometime next fall and you see a Yankee army officer who looks familiar, don't worry. You're not imagining things.

Actually, you may very well know that Union officer, or at least have seen him around Mountain View.

Tommy Jovanovic, 30, of Mountain View, landed a part in the movie "The Blue and the Grey," which was filmed in northwest Arkansas recently. Filmed by Columbia Pictures, of Hollywood, Ca., the movie is scheduled to air on CBS-TV sometime next fall.

Jovanovic, also known as "Tommy J." to his friends, said he got the part in the movie as quite a surprise.

He was riding horses at the Stone County Saddle Club area at the fairgrounds not too long ago, when a local man, Kenneth Brownlee, asked him if he'd like to fill out an application to appear in the movie. Brownlee, who moved to Mountain View from California, apparently knew some of the people associated with the movie and was asked if he could "round up" some horses and some people who "knew how to ride," Tommy said.

That sounded like it was right up his alley, Tommy said, since he breaks and trains horses in addition to doing some carpentry, guiding on the White River and truck driving for a living.

"At first I thought he was kidding, but I filled out the application anyhow, and sure enough a couple months later this woman called me up and asked if I could be in the movie," he said. "She said she was from Columbia Pictures."

"I thought it was some of my friends playing a joke on me, but then you could tell she was serious, I said yeah, I could be in the movie. Where am I supposed to report?"

He reported the next day, he said, and from then on he was in the movie business.

His part isn't a real big one, he said, but it is a speaking part (he says "Hey, pass me another drink" in a tavern scene) and more significant than an "extra" part.

He plays a major in the Union army who is an aid to General Ulysses S. Grant. He appears in a number of close-up shots, is seen riding a horse, and also is "killed" in another scene while playing a Confederate soldier.

His role in "The Blue and the Grey" makes him somewhat of a "veteran" in the acting profession, as he also appeared as an Indian "extra" in "Tie a Yellow Ribbon," and as a cowpoke in "Rio Bravo," starring John Wayne several years ago, he said.

So what's it like being in a movie around a bunch of movie stars? Stars in the film include Gregory Peck, Loyd Bridges, Rip Torn, Stacey Keach, Paul Winfield and John Hammond. It's very interesting if it's the first time you've done it, Tommy said, but after awhile you could see how the work might get a little boring at times.

"There's a lot of times when there's nothing to do except stand around while they're shooting a scene that you don't appear in," he said.

He admits that the first time he took part in the movie business really gave him a charge, though, as he was quite struck with "all the glamour and the big shots, you know."

And what are all those "big shots" really like when they're not in the movies?

"They're just like anybody else," he said.

He singled out Stacey Keach and Loyd Bridges as being "regular guys" who didn't mind signing autographs or posing for pictures with the cast members, most of whom, like him, had come from small towns in Arkansas to play in the movie.

Peck, Jovanovic said, didn't sign autographs or pose for pictures, but not because he was conceited or thought he was too good for anyone else.

"He's just a real intense actor, and if he's not on the scene doing a take, he's studying and concentrating on his part," he said.

And were there any funny or unusual things that happened to him during the filming?

Yes, during a cavalry charge scene, he said. It was the "ninth or tenth" take of the scene and some of the actors were getting a little bored, he said.

Instead of veering off of the camera truck when they were supposed to, Stacey Keach instigated the "cavalry" to keep charging the truck until the last second, Tommy said.

"We charged 'em until the last second," he said. "You should have seen those guys jumping all around that truck," he laughed.

Another instance took place when the actors were all standing around on the set, waiting for a scene to be filmed. An autograph hound asked for his autograph, but the youngster seemed real disappointed when he was told that Tommy was not some famous Hollywood celebrity.

"You should have seen the expression on his face," Jovanovic said.

Another time, autograph hounds got his signature and that of another Arkansas boy, he said, and completely bypassed Stacey Keach, who was standing nearby.

Keach kind of smiled and said something like "how do you like that?"

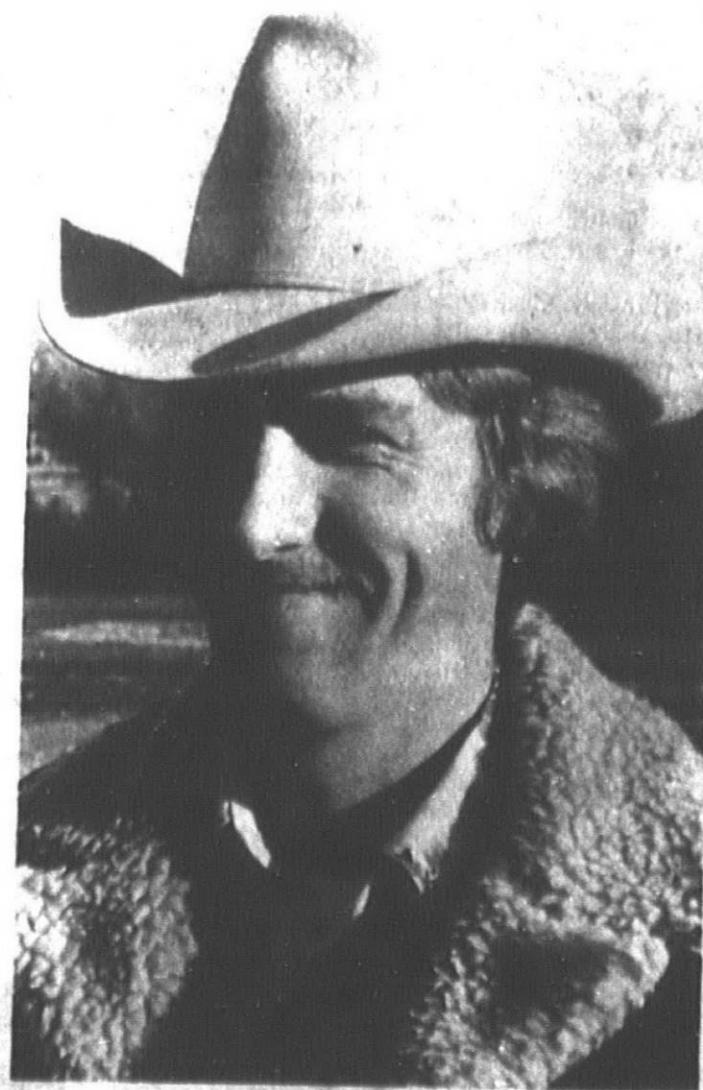

Since he's returned home from the acting business, Tommy said he's received his share of good-natured kidding, especially from his dad.

"He ribs me about becoming a millionaire movie actor," he said.

Summing up his experience, Tommy said he looks at it as something he can "tell his grandkids."

But would he want to do it for a living?

"You're darn right. I wouldn't mind it a bit," he said.

Editorials:

Let's do our part

The Mountain View School Board did its job Monday night.

That is, it put before the voters the chance to make an overwhelming change in the school facilities at Mountain View.

Now it's up to the voters. The school board is asking the voters of the district to approve its proposal for a building program that will see a new high school, a new middle school, a new gymnasium, a couple of elementary classrooms and other related facilities constructed at the elementary campus.

Needless to say, it would be a building program that the community could take immense pride in.

In the next two months before the election, there will be a lot of information disseminated in the community concerning the building program, its costs, etc. Hopefully, most of this information will be accurate and truly depict the issues that are involved. However, it's been our experience in the past that some unreliable information has been spread by project detractors also. Hopefully, the members of the community will be able to make the distinction.

There are a lot of reasons why this matter is of great importance to our children and our community as well. For the children, it would mean a far better place to learn, which in itself is more conducive to learning. For the community, a positive vote on the matter would demonstrate community solidarity, which would have many pluses, including making Mountain View look more attractive to industry.

The board has taken the first step toward better education in Mountain View, and they will continue taking steps by promoting the issue within the community.

In the next several weeks, the rest of the community must do its job, and that is to learn as much about the matter as they possibly can, and then to make an educated decision on the new building program.

Aberration at the AEA

[from Arkansas Gazette]

It is not a satisfactory explanation of low teacher salaries and the poor state of public education generally in Arkansas to say that the schools have added 6,500 to their faculties the past decade without an appreciable increase in the number of students. The Arkansas Education Association has done the schools no service by suggesting that the schools have bloated their staffs at the expense of teacher salaries.

Since the 1971 school year, the average daily attendance in the public schools has increased by only 1,500 while the certified staff has increased by 6,500. The AEA said perhaps half of them were really needed and suggested that the rest were administrators and others whose contributions were not worth the costs.

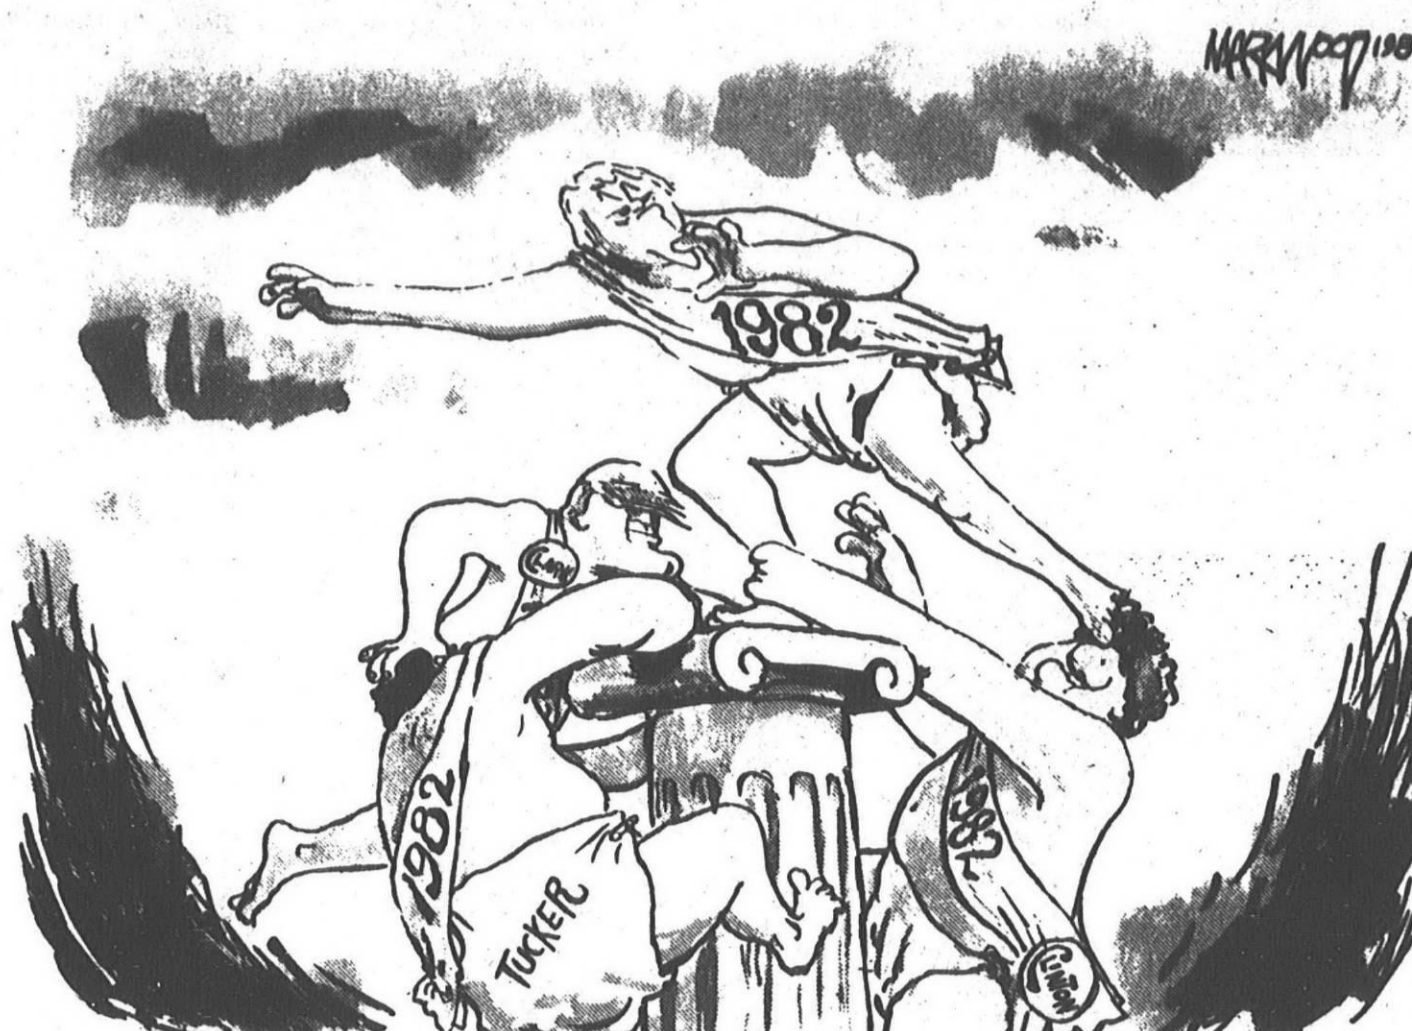

The AEA's conclusion requires the judgment that some important developments in public education were not worthwhile. More than 3,100 teachers have been added to the faculties since 1971 to provide kindergartens and to offer instruction to handicapped children, both of which became a requirement of state law and, in the case of special education for the handicapped a mandate of federal law. The number of librarians almost doubled during the period, but half the public schools of Arkansas still have no librarian. The number of guidance counselors also nearly doubled during the decade, yet fewer than half the schools have them now. The schools have one counselor for every 800 students. A number of schools have broadened their offerings and hired teachers to try to meet accrediting standards, but, even at that, most Arkansas high schools do not offer the rich curricula that their students need.

The average number of pupils per teacher has improved from 23.8 to 18.3 since 1971, mostly owing to the good ratio of pupils to kindergarten and special-education teachers. That is a desirable trend that is generally supported by educators.

It is true that the impoverished public schools are not immune to the bureaucratic weakness for building up administrative levels. The administrative staffs have been beefed up by 558 over the decade, and the AEA can make a little better case that it is too many. Arkansas ranks 12th in the nation in administrative costs per pupil while it is at the bottom in instructional costs, but that is not the result of overstaffing. Arkansas schools, strangely, tend to make a greater differential between the salaries of administrators and teachers than do schools in many states, but we doubt that many school districts are topheavy with administrators.

The important statistic in 1971 and today is the expenditure per child, for all purposes, and Arkansas is never more than a few dollars off the bottom and far below the average of the states. Teacher salaries could have been improved somewhat more if the public had decided that kindergartens, special education for the handicapped, libraries and ancillary services such as counseling were not terribly important. We would be disappointed if most teachers did not consider those gains to be too little rather than too much. The AEA holds the same view in its more thoughtful intervals, as in 1980, when it pushed an initiative that would have required schools to broaden their curricula, reduce class sizes in the elementary grades — and hire more teachers.

Slabtown Sojourner

By E.C. Copeland

If I planned on boozing in the new year Little Rock would be a drunk until he is sober — generally from three to six hours, depending upon how much sauce he soaked up. Workers will then urge the drunk to join the mission's alcoholism rehabilitation program.

A spokesman said the mission wanted to help the men with their drinking problems, but it was also "a chance to witness for Jesus Christ."

"Our main goal is to give glory to the Lord," the spokesman added. The program should be a "beautiful opportunity for many men to meet Jesus who've never met Him before." He said he hoped the men "will have a chance to sober up and be witnessed to and maybe go home to their families."

I think the program has a lot of merit and, with a few minor changes, could be adopted in Stone County.

There is always a sharp increase in local arrests for public drunkenness over the holidays, especially on New Year's Eve.

Since Stone County doesn't have a mission, the sheriff could meet with local preachers to select a church to serve as a "drunk tank" on New Year's Eve. Instead of slapping drunks into jail, the cops could deliver them to the designated church where cots would be provided. Early on New Year's morning the hung over, suffering drunks would be set upon by a battery of a half dozen area preachers, each armed with an hour sermon.

The preachers should be the fire and brimstone type who passionately believe in the evils of drinking. All six preachers would focus their sermons on "demon run", with a dash of "the wages of sin are death," and a big dose of "eternal damnation to a burning hell."

Six hours of such terrifying sermons would scare the pants off a healthy man; imagine how it would affect a shaking and sick drunk who thinks he has a fatal hangover. If a drunk becomes so fearful of his impending doom that he gets saved and wants to be baptized, he could be immediately whisked off to the nearest creek and socked under for the Lord which would also speed up the sobering up ordeal. The preachers could then draw straws to see who would claim the sobered drunk as a new church member.

I believe it would be a worthwhile program. But unfortunately, the Supreme Court would undoubtedly rule that it was cruel and unusual punishment — or it would be in my case. I would much rather spend six days in jail than suffer through six hours of fire and brimstone preaching.

Letters to the editor:

Letters to the editor:

To the editor: I am writing this letter in response to the one published in last week's paper denouncing Country Western music as it is being played on KWOZ. In the limited amount of time that I have spent listening to the station, I have found the programming to lack creativity and artistic content. I don't know if I'd go as far as the letter's author went in his/her recriminations of C/W music. The accusations that C/W music is designed to promote the use of alcohol seems reminiscent of the accusations of past decades that rock music promotes the use of drugs. As far as our torn social fabric, I don't know about that either. There was a time when people thought that it would make young promiscuous to listen to Buddy Holly. I don't know about that either. There worry so much about the children being corrupted as I do they being bored. Taste and moral values differ from person to person and place to place and time to time. But garbage is garbage and it is sad that our new radio station is just a Country Western version of the same old commercial fiddle-faddle.

No, C/W is not my most favorite type of music. I don't expect the radio station to play just the kind of music I like. That would be ludicrous as well as financially disastrous. I would ask the station, however, to put more variety in their programming and more quality in the songs they play.

I don't know if the new radio station knows it, but, playing music is a big part of the culture around here. I've spent a lot of happy hours listening to the local musicians pick and sing. They seem devoted to the music they play.

Stone County is a place where the pickers come to play the old time music and you'd think the local radio station would reflect this, some. No, they're just concerned with using a strict and limited format in hopes of getting the most ears to sell for commercials to broadcast over our airwaves.

I was excited when I first read that a radio station was coming to town. Now I'm disappointed. Oh well, that's what we bought a tape player for.

Normally I wouldn't think twice about putting my name on this letter. But, considering that the author of last week's letter thought it wise not to include his, I would ask the editors please not to publish my name along with this letter. Maybe that person knows something that I don't.

P.S. I thought that the picture of the burning sock in the paper Christmas Eve was in very poor taste. Name withheld by request

The game was "interesting" all right, but not because of the fog. I'd hate to have been one of the 70,000 people who spent a lot of money on tickets, transportation, motels and food to get stuck up in the upper levels of the Gator Bowl and watch the fog roll in!

So they're thinking about making another movie in Mountain View, huh? How about that. First, The Bootleggers, then Jane Fonda and Dolly Parton, then a John Denver special (maybe), and now Wolverton Mountain. How about that. Right here in Mountain View, Arkansas. What I'd like to know is how we got so popular all of a sudden!

I wasn't here when they filmed "The Bootleggers," or "The Bootleggers' Angel," as it was re-released, but I thought after seeing the movie that they did pretty good job. Having Slim Pickens and Jaclyn Smith in the picture didn't hurt anything, either.

Word must be travelling fast, though, about this new picture they're going to make here. I was in the store the other day and there seemed to be a rush on sunglasses.

Laura Beth Nesbitt and Edwin Dale West were united in marriage at 3:30 P.M. on Sunday, December 20, 1981. The double ring ceremony was performed by the bride's father, Rev. Lloyd Nesbitt. Matron of Honor was the sister of the bride, Mrs. Bernice Nesbitt Green and the Best Man was the groom's brother, James Fowler.

The ceremony, attended only by a few family members, took place before the fireplace in the Old Nesbitt House in the Herpel District. The house stands on the original site of the log cabin where Beth's great, great grandfather, James Elliott Nesbitt, settled with his family about 1872. The house was built by her great grandfather, John T. Nesbitt. Both her grandfather, Omar D. Nesbitt, and her father, Lloyd Nesbitt, have lived in the house in the past.

Many marriages have taken place in the Old Nesbitt House before the fireplace. John T. Nesbitt, who was a Justice of the Peace, performed the wedding ceremonies of many in the community, including some of his own children, there. Among them were Alberta Nesbitt and Charlie Williams, September 15, 1898, and Stella Nesbitt and Oscar Williams, June 26, 1899.

The new Mrs. West is the daughter of Mrs. Pauline Nesbitt of Mountain View and Rev. Lloyd Nesbitt of the Herpel District, Stone County.

Dale West is the son of Art and Wanda West of the Signal Hill District, Stone County. He has served in the U. S. Air Force and completed a horticulture course in Wichita, KS. He is currently employed at the Rainbow Restaurant in Mountain View. The couple plans to open a plant nursery sometime in the future.

The wedding ceremony was followed by a brief reception, also held in the Old Nesbitt House. Mrs. Bueford Brown, Mrs. Howard Nesbitt and Mrs. Jim Nesbitt assisted in serving.

After a brief honeymoon, the couple will reside on Herpel route, Mountain View.

Ozark folktales book is being released here

A two-record album of Ozark folktales and folk songs, titled "Not Far From Here..." has just been released. The album is the first such recording of the art of storytelling in the Arkansas Ozarks.

The album is the result of three years of recording work by two Arkansas folklorists. George West of Little Rock, the project director, and Bill McNeil of Mountain View, the Folklorist at the Ozark Folk Center, recorded a dozen different local storytellers and singers from around north Arkansas.

Featured on one record are family folktales, an Indian legend, an oral history of a bitter feud, civil war stories, "big windies" and other tall tales. On the record of folk songs are native American ballads, Ozark playparty songs and variants of old English and Scottish ballads. All of the selections are told or sung in person by native Ozarkers.

Several tales and songs on the record have survived from pioneer times in the Ozarks. One story about "The Hoop Snake" dates back to Colonial America, while "The Rattlesnake Song" is a version of the oldest known native American ballad. Other songs such as the "House Carpenter's Wife" actually "crossed the waters" with the ancestors of these Ozark families when they migrated from the British Isles.

Included with the album is a 32-page book with photographs of the performers, a calligrapher's map of the Ozarks, background on Ozark folklore and a transcription of each story and song. Of special interest to teachers are essays on the origin of the name "Ozarks" and on remnants of Shakespearean English in Ozark folk speech, and a page of suggestions for use of the album in the classroom.

The album is available from the Ozark Folk Center and from local bookstores, museums and craft shops in Little Rock, Mountain View and Eureka Springs. Copies can be ordered by mail from: Arkansas Traditions, 1018 Rock Street, Little Rock, AR 72202. The price of the two records and book is $17.50.

The album will be the first in a series of records of narrative and musical traditions of all parts of the state. Revenues from the sale of the album will be used to produce the next album.

Arkansas Traditions is a nonprofit project sponsored by the Carroll County Heritage Center. The first album was funded, in part, with grants from the Arkansas Arts Council, the Arkansas Endowment for the Humanities and the National Endowment for the Arts.

Good news. Recent changes in the Individual Retirement Account, effective January 1, 1982, will permit two-pay check couples to each contribute up to $2,000 per year to Calico Rock Bank IRA. A contribution of $4,000 per year for 30 years produces total principal deposits of $120,000. At 12% interest, the value of your retirement fund by age 65 would be $1,081,170. (See Chart at right for more examples.)

Your State Bank of Calico Rock IRA Will Help Cut Your Taxes.

Every dollar you contribute to your Calico Rock Bank IRA is tax deductible until withdrawn as income. That means a working couple in a 30% tax bracket can realize a tax savings of $1,200 the first year on a contribution of $4,000. Tax savings may vary in subsequent years, but your Calico Rock Bank IRA contributions and interest are fully tax deductible until withdrawn. The tax savings over a 30-year period can be dramatic.

Also effective January 1, 1982, other changes in the regulations covering the Calico Rock Bank IRA make it possible for persons already covered by a company retirement plan to contribute to a tax sheltered IRA plan. Additionally, the total annual contribution for one-paycheck couples has been raised to $2,250.

A State Bank of Calico Rock IRA Automatically Keeps Up With Inflation.

Calico Rock Bank now offers an IRA variable rate deposit instrument.
