‘Tell Me a Story’ interweaves fairy tales into dark, dramatic thriller

BY JAY BOBBIN

Some stories are worth telling anew.

The CW evidently believes so, since it's bringing a series from a sister outlet to broadcast television. “Tell Me a Story” streamed on CBS All Access, and the show begins again as it makes its CW debut Tuesday, July 28. Executive-produced by Kevin Williamson (“The Vampire Diaries”), it puts contemporary, sometimes creepy twists on classic fairy tales – for starters, “Little Red Riding Hood,” “Hansel and Gretel” and “The Three Little Pigs.”

Danielle Campbell, of the “Vampire Diaries” spinoff “The Originals,” plays Red Riding Hood surrogate Kayla. Relocating to New York with her father (Sam Jaeger, “Parenthood”) after her mother's death, she has an unusual high-school teacher (Billy Magnussen, “Game Night”) who's the counterpart of the wolf in the correlating story.

Adapting “Tell Me a Story” from the Spanish series “Cuentame un Cuento,” Williamson explains that he and his creative team “chose these three fairy tales because they sort of complemented each other with their themes and the morals of the stories. They told three diverse story lines, and (we’ve) sort of interwoven them in a way in which the original series did not. The ‘Three Little Pigs’ story line might be reminiscent of the original (show), but ‘Little Red Riding Hood’ and ‘Hansel and Gretel’ are just products of me and a roomful of writers.”

As for how “Tell Me a Story” changes things up, co-star Campbell reflects that the original “Little Red Riding Hood” was “this very sweet girl. I think that in our adaptation, she’s going through loss, and she’s just trying to distract herself and party and drink and go out. She’s kind of this really troubled kid, and you get to watch that.”

Kim Cattrall, James Wolk (“Zoo”), Daria Ramirez (“Heroes”), Dorian Missick and – reuniting with Williamson after their “Vampire Diaries” days – Paul Wesley also are in “Tell Me a Story's” first season. Wesley and Campbell returned in different roles for the show's second and final round, which adapted “Sleeping Beauty,” “Cinderella” and “Beauty and the Beast” in its own way (and added Odette Annable and Carrie-Anne Moss, among others, as co-stars).

“Tell Me a Story” likely will undergo some editing despite The CW's trademark edginess, since content standards differ in the streaming world. Also featured in the forthcoming James Bond movie “No Time to Die,” Magnussen says he knew the initial boundaries of his role.

“Every project is individual,” he reasons, “and how you address it is individual to that process. And how it lives inside you as a performer, creator, whatnot, it's going to manifest itself uniquely. You have to know the playground you are playing in, and then you create your world there.”

The luckiest signs this week: Capricorn, Aquarius and Pisces

ARIES

You need to make changes for the sake of your mental well-being. You'll likely decide to adopt a more spiritual lifestyle, and might even organize a pilgrimage.

TAURUS

You'll be concerned about your financial situation after using your credit card on vacation. However, you'll keep the party going for a bit longer before you rein in your expenses.

GEMINI

Wait until the end of your vacation to make an important decision. You should take the time to carefully consider the pros and cons. Otherwise, stress could push you to make the wrong choice.

CANCER

You have a tendency to burn the candle at both ends. Take steps to channel your energy more efficiently. People will be relying on you, and you'll do whatever it takes to help them.
- ♌

LEO

You'll enjoy performances and other artistic events during your vacation. You'll be the focus of everyone's attention and receive a round of applause or some other form of praise.

VIRGO

A family matter or renovation project will likely take up most of your time. You'll appreciate the comfort of your own home and surrounding yourself with family while on vacation.

LIBRA

You'll be quite the chatterbox this week, and may end up talking to someone new on the phone. You'll also have a lot of errands to run. Meanwhile, something out of the ordinary sparks your curiosity.
- ♏

SCORPIO

A worrying financial situation will motivate you to make changes for the better. You'll successfully save up enough money to achieve a major goal or at least pay off some of your debt.
- ♐

SAGITTARIUS

Sudden inspiration will send you in a new direction. You'll find the determination to make a major transformation and seek a fresh start.

CAPRICORN

You'll need to rest after spending time in a large crowd. If you're on vacation, you'll opt for a relaxing activity. A museum tour or a stroll through the woods will do you good.
- ♒

AQUARIUS

You'll organize an unexpected event and get together with all your loved ones. Your circle of friends will grow, and your popularity will be evident on social media.

PISCES

You'll take a spontaneous trip to an exciting destination. You'll seriously contemplate the idea of resuming your studies or finding a job that's more in line with your values.

Mike Nichol's Top 10 Movies

BY STAFF WRITERS

"Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf?" (1966): Nichols made his screen directing debut with this searing adaptation of Edward Albee's play about a bickering couple (Elizabeth Taylor, Richard Burton) and their relatively innocent dinner guests (George Segal, Sandy Dennis). Taylor and Dennis won Academy Awards.

"The Graduate" (1967): The one-of-a-kind classic that largely made Nichols' career, this comedy-drama – which earned him an Oscar – boasts Simon & Garfunkel tunes and holds up beautifully. Dustin Hoffman became an immediate star as Benjamin, the nervous college grad who falls prey to the wily Mrs. Robinson (Anne Bancroft), then falls for her daughter (Katharine Ross).

"Catch-22" (1970): Alan Arkin leads a superb all-star cast in Nichols' version of the Joseph Heller novel about a World War II soldier striving to be declared insane and, thus, dismissed from service.

"Carnal Knowledge" (1971): The relationships among four people (Jack Nicholson, Ann-Margret, Candice Bergen, Art Garfunkel) form an emotional roller coaster over many years.

"Silkwood" (1983): Meryl Streep is both powerful and heartbreaking in the true story of the nuclear plant worker determined to expose unsafe conditions.

"Heartburn" (1986): An underrated Nichols gem, this comedy based on Nora Ephron's novel mirrors the ups and downs of her relationship with reporter Carl Bernstein. Streep and Nicholson are typically great as the couple.

"Working Girl" (1988): Nichols is in top form with this comedy about a secretary (Melanie Griffith) who uses her boss' absence (Sigourney Weaver) to engineer a business deal with a down-on-his-luck broker (Harrison Ford).

"The Birdcage" (1996): "La Cage aux Folles" gets a Nichols-caliber spin, with Robin Williams and Nathan Lane great as companions who stage an elaborate charade for the prospective in-laws of the Williams character's son.

"Wit" (TV, 2001): Nichols began an association with HBO by directing Emma Thompson (who also adapted the script) in Margaret Edson's play about a professor's struggle to come to terms with her cancer.

"Angels in America" (TV, 2003): Also for HBO, Nichols tackled Tony Kushner's award-winning play about various individuals at the crest of the AIDS crisis. Nichols earned an Emmy (as he had for "Wit") in directing Streep, Thompson and Al Pacino, among many others.

'The Graduate' still earns top marks

BY JAY BOBBIN

Benjamin Braddock forever will be a little worried about his future.

And for good reason. If he's not quite sure where he's going at the start of director Mike Nichols' 1967 classic "The Graduate" – currently streaming on Hulu – he doesn't have much cause to be any more certain in the picture's famous climax, though it might appear on the surface that he's charted his course.

What happens in-between is the stuff of which iconic movies are made. Dustin Hoffman had been acting professionally for several years, largely on television, when Nichols made him an immediate star by casting him as very nervous college grad Benjamin (a part for which Robert Redford, Hoffman's later "All the President's Men" co-star, had tested).

After brilliantly setting up the privileged background from which Benjamin hails (the scuba suit in the pool!), Nichols and screenwriters Buck Henry – who also has a great cameo as a hotel desk clerk – and Calder Willingham shift to the main story, the seduction of Benjamin by calculating family friend Mrs. Robinson (a sterling Anne Bancroft, in a legendary role Doris Day steadfastly turned down). Benjamin has his doubts about the secret affair, and those only are amplified when he reconnects with unsuspecting Robinson daughter Elaine (Katharine Ross, whose contribution to the film tends to be underrated beside those other fellow "Graduate" stars).

Paul Simon and Art Garfunkel also are invaluable to "The Graduate," Nichols having made the inspired choice to use their mood-enhancing music throughout the picture. The filmmaker also cast every other character perfectly, from William Daniels and Elizabeth Wilson as Benjamin's social-standing-minded parents to Murray Hamilton as Mr. Robinson and Norman Fell as a landlord who simply doesn't like tenant Benjamin. And as a graduation-party attendee, Walter Brooke always could be identified afterward for one sincerely delivered word of advice: "Plastics."

Despite the fact that it's now more than 50 years old, "The Graduate" is one of those movies that never loses its freshness, thanks to its superbly original adaptation from a novel by Charles Webb. Though there never has been a sequel (mercifully, in the eyes of many), the tale factored into the 2005 release "Rumor Has It ...," in which Kevin Costner's character is thought to be the inspiration for Benjamin.

Indeed, "The Graduate" continues to stand alone – and in an industry increasingly marked by reboots, spinoffs and remakes, that is something still to be celebrated.

Celebrity Q&A with Dakota Fanning

OF 'THE ALIENIST: ANGEL OF DARKNESS' ON TNT

You're a fan of crime dramas, correct?

I am, yes. Fiction and nonfiction (laughs). I'm a junkie when it comes to that stuff, yeah.

Did you learn anything new about forensics from doing "The Alienist"?

You know, something that I loved about the show when I first read the scripts years ago was the integration of the birth of forensics. You know, like when we show in "The Alienist" the fingerprints and like how that came to be and we get into that a little bit more. ... But as a viewer, I'm super-entertained by all of that and kind of seeing the methods that would have been used during this time and seeing how far they've come. And I do love all that, for sure.

Big Bang Theory’s Mayim Bialik hosts charitable ‘Celebrity Show-Off’

BY JAY BOBBIN

No one may be more surprised to see Mayim Bialik hosting a competition show than Mayim Bialik herself.

The former co-star of “The Big Bang Theory” has found TBS’ “Celebrity Show-Off” suits her right where she is ... at home, during the coronavirus pandemic. She’s working with a very limited crew on the Tuesday series, in which such celebrities as Tori Spelling, Ja Rule and filmmaker Kevin Smith – also participating from their homes – vie to win money for charity by devising content to keep viewers watching their respective online channels.

“It’s obviously something designed for the quarantine,” Bialik confirms, “a way to keep people entertained and distracted in what’s become a really difficult 2020. Other things that have happened in recent weeks also have made it a really hard time to balance entertainment with social responsibility, but I’m very happy to be working and to do it in ways that are safe. It’s been very humbling to have to do my own hair and makeup.”

In fact, part of ex-“Blossom” star Bialik’s house is now a virtual studio, thanks to a huge “green screen” that gives the impression of her being elsewhere. “I stand there by myself, adjusting myself in the camera,” she reports. “The others are wearing masks 25 feet away from me, and it’s really amazing.”

Based on the Korean show “My Little Television,” “Celebrity Show-Off ” is starting Bialik’s TV return. The owner of a Ph.D. in neuroscience, she’s slated to star in next season’s Fox sitcom “Call Me Kat,” which she’ll executive- produce with fellow “Big Bang” alum Jim Parsons. She also was slated to direct Dustin Hoffman, Candice Bergen and “Big Bang’s” Simon Helberg in a movie she wrote, but the pandemic postponed it.

“Where our industry has been hit the hardest is not the celebrities that you miss seeing,” Bialik reasons. “It’s the people who actually make these shows, who need to pay their mortgages and have insurance for their kids. I’m grateful for all the hard-working men and women who are ready to find safe ways for us to return to work.”

Food Network digital lends itself to be the college of foodie knowledge

BY GEORGE DICKIE

With the quarantine, two of America’s favorite pastimes – traveling and going out to eat – have been put on the back burner.

Which leaves a disproportionate number of people bored out of their minds and in need of a project. Or at the very least, a distraction.

If you answer to that description, the Food Network website offers all manner of how-tos on improving your grilling, shopping for produce and food storage, among other topics. So if you’re in the mood to sharpen your culinary game and have some time on your hands – which a lot of us do – boot up the laptop or tablet, log on and check out these ideas.

“Grilling Central: 500 Ways to Win Summer” (www.foodnetwork.com/grilling): Here, you will find a library’s worth of recipes and information on summer foods, ranging from steaks, burgers, hot dogs, chicken, seafood and veggies on the grill and sides and desserts from the kitchen to picnic fare and kitchen hacks. And if you’re game to try grilling a whole chicken (and not just with a beer can in the cavity), this is the place for you. Food Network personalities Bobby Flay, Trisha Yearwood and Tyler Florence also weigh in with their favorite summer recipes.

“Summer Produce Guide” (www.foodnetwork.com/in-season-now/packages/summer-produce-guide): Be it fruits and berries, slice-and-eat tomatoes or salad greens, there is no shortage of recipes for items from the produce section or farmer’s market here. And who can resist a veggie paella? You’ll also find out what to do with produce that’s about to go bad, learn the many uses for pesto and get tips from Alex Guarnaschelli on how to pick out the freshest produce, among other suggestions.

“Summer Weeknight Dinners” (www.foodnetwork.com/quick-and-easy/packages/weeknight-summer-dinners): The ho-hum mid-week meal gets a jolt of creativity with a litany of easy-to-make recipes ranging from Sandra Lee’s zesty corn and Rachael Ray’s 15-minute dessert to a lemony shrimp scampi pasta from Melissa d’Arabian that looks amazing. And if your tastes tend toward the exotic, there is a Tuscan chicken skillet, a roasted veggie Buddha bowl and a Greek salad. The list is endless.

“Help Around the Kitchen” (www.foodnetwork.com/how-to/packages/help-around-the-kitchen): Everyone can use a little help now and then and here you’ll find knowledge on how to make your kitchen a more user-friendly place, with tips on organization, cleaning and cleaners, loading a dishwasher, refrigerator maintenance, food storage and freezing and what to stock in your pantry. Basically all the things the average home chef never gives much thought to.

View from the Couch BY JAY BOBBIN

“The Outsider: The Complete First Season”

It might seem impossible for someone to be in two places at the same time – including a murder scene – unless Stephen King is involved. One of the horror icon’s novels fuels this engrossing, made-for-HBO melodrama largely adapted by Richard Price (who also co-wrote the cable network’s acclaimed “The Night Of”) and follows a police detective (played by “Bloodline’s” Ben Mendelsohn, the show’s producer as well) who grieves the loss of his son as he investigates another youngster’s vicious death. A teacher-coach (“Ozark” Emmy winner Jason Bateman, also an executive producer here, plus the director of the first two episodes) is a solid suspect, but he has a strong alibi. Two-time Emmy recipient Mare Winningham, Tony winner and “Harriet” Oscar nominee Cynthia Erivo, Paddy Considine, Julianne Nicholson and Yul Vazquez also are in the extremely solid cast. »» (Not rated: AS, N, P, V) (Also on Blu-ray)

“Orange Is The New Black: Season Seven” Though binge-watching of streaming series is a common practice now, this prison-set Netflix comedy-drama had a great deal to do with making that a “thing,” since the conversation piece that the show was made it a “must” for water-cooler chatter. This concluding season – which wraps up in a way that should satisfy longtime followers – sees Litchfield inmate Piper (Taylor Schilling) released back into society, but she has a very tough time assimilating. Cast regulars Natasha Lyonne and Laura Prepon each directed an episode here, while actor Andrew McCarthy (“St. Elmo’s Fire”) filled that job on a couple of others. Kate Mulgrew, Uzo

Aduba, Danielle Brooks, Taryn Manning, Alysia Reiner and Yael Stone also put final touches on their characters here. DVD extras: two “making-of” documentaries; “A Message to the Fans.” »» (Not rated: AS, N, P, V)

“An Accidental Studio” When he started out as a Beatle, George Harrison might not have entertained becoming a movie producer ... but through the firm he co-founded, HandMade Films, he turned out a number of notable and widely praised pictures that are excerpted in this documentary about the so-called “accidental studio.” Among the titles are “Time Bandits,” the Monty Python group’s “Life of Brian,” “The Long Good Friday,” “Mona Lisa” and “Withnail and I.” The late Harrison himself is seen in interview footage, as are many other talents who were involved in HandMade’s movies including actors Michael Caine, Bob Hoskins and Richard E. Grant, filmmaker Neil Jordan and Monty Python members Michael Palin and Terry Gilliam. »» (Not rated: AS, P) (Also on Blu-ray)

“Hawaii Five-O: The Final Season” Though it ultimately didn’t match the original version’s 12 seasons, this recently ended CBS reboot of the police drama still had a very healthy run of its own, lasting 10 years. The concluding round ultimately brings the saga of its Steve McGarrett (played by Alex O’Loughlin, who also wrote and directed one of the last episodes) full-circle, but before it gets there, it finds danger paying a visit to Five-0 headquarters and Halloween turning lethal (with the latter story featuring the return of former cast regular Masi Oka). One of the tales serves as a crossover with another Hawaii-set CBS series that’s also gotten an update, “Magnum P.I.,” with title star Jay Hernandez among the actors from that show appearing. Founding cast member Scott Caan also saw this program out, with Chuck Norris and Rob Morrow among guest stars, and Christine Lahti reprising the part of McGarrett’s mother. »» (Not rated: AS, P, V)

“Thirteen Ghosts” Now being offered in a Blu-ray “Collector’s Edition,” this update of a cult classic by horror-movie gimmick master William Castle is a vastly slicker, considerably more graphic version that does have its moments. A house turns out to be a giant, reconfiguring puzzle for the family that inherits it, thanks to its inhabiting ghosts who only can be seen by the new occupants if they wear special glasses. (That element was a nod to the 1960 original, for which moviegoers had to wear such goggles to see the ghosts in 3-D.) This edition’s extras include recent interviews with director Steve Beck and cast members Shannon Elizabeth, Matthew Harrison, John DiSantis and Herbert Ducnanson; among additional stars are Tony Shalhoub, Embeth Davidtz, Matthew Lillard and F. Murray Abraham. »» (R: AS, N, P, V)

“Wonder Woman: The Complete Collection” This Blu-ray release of both incarnations of the 1970s Lynda Carter television series was meant to coordinate with the theatrical debut of Gal Gadot’s “Wonder Woman 1984,” which was delayed by the coronavirus pandemic, but this still is a nostalgic blast for fans of the iconic DC Comics character or classic TV in general. »» (Not rated: V)
